On the Grapevine

● A Justice Department insider says it is already known who leaked the minutes of the secret National Security Council meetings to Jack Anderson. It took the sleuths very little time to find the guilty party who will be dealt with accordingly, was the word.

● China is so hot a topic today a Washington writer has persuaded Alice Longworth to cooperate on an article he is writing about her visit to China—and Japan, too—over 65 years ago.

There never was a more glamorous trip to the mysterious Orient than that of "Princess Alice," who, as daughter of the president of the United States, was received royally and presented with handsome presents by the Empress of China.

The writer is Michael Teague, a member of Kim Roosevelt's consulting firm for foreign governments, who also happens to be a cousin of the brother novelists, Lawrence and Gerald Durrell.

Mrs. Longworth has lent him photographs of the trip and he has acquired others from the Library of Congress. The story is scheduled for a coming issue of Vogue.
